

Kenya to Become Regional Headquarters for Toyota

March 4, 2010

Toyota officially announced plans this week to establish its regional headquarters for East and Central Africa in Kenya.

This comes after Prime Minister Odinga spent several days in Japan encouraging the company to invest in Kenya. Toyota responded by locating nearly 646,000 square feet of land in Nairobi to build its regional hub.

Toyota executives are currently in Nairobi discussing other ways they can invest in Kenya. They have already announced plans to station a green energy expert in Kenya to explore ways the company can take advantage of Kenya's blossoming green industries.

Prime Minister Odinga expressed his satisfaction regarding Toyota's display of confidence in the Kenyan economy. He also pledged that any company such as Toyota wishing to invest in Kenya will receive full support from the Kenyan government: "We will do everything possible to enable Toyota and all other businesses that want to set up here do so with great ease."
